If you are a Mental Health Graduate Student interested in...

- ◆ Learning more about psychodynamic theory and practice
- ◆ Working one on one with an experienced clinician
- ◆ Thinking about clients from a psychoanalytic point of view
- ◆ Deepening your understanding of the human psyche

Check out our Psychoanalytic Case Consultation program!

OPC's mission is to educate psychotherapists and the community in order to promote emotional growth, honor diversity, and develop the life of the mind.

In keeping with this goal, we are offering mental health graduate students access to free one-on-one consultation with psychoanalytically-trained clinicians.

Get Involved by...

- ◆ Calling one of the clinicians listed on our website (www.oregonpsychoanalytic.org) to set up an initial consultation
- ◆ You and the consultant decide when to meet and how often.
- ◆ Free consultation can last up to one year.

Consultants participating in this program offer a variety of credentials, experience, and styles. Please review their profile pages at oregonpsychoanalytic.org or on their individual websites to see who might be a good fit for you.

For reference: Consultation is the same service as supervision, but a consultant bears no legal responsibility for the student's caseload, whereas a supervisor is legally responsible. Thus, a student receives supervision at a practicum or internship, and consultation outside the training program. By participating in this program, it is understood that the student is working under the license of another clinician in their practicum/internship.
